David delivers cutting-edge legal advice and practical business solutions to health care providers facing challenges with their governmental and commercial reimbursement and revenue cycle management. He is an expert in the nuances of complicated managed care negotiations and contracting, payment disputes, audits, payer investigations, and litigation. David is a seasoned advocate representing providers in high-stakes disputes with managed care companies, health insurers, third-party administrators, FEHB plans, Medicare Advantage plans, Medicaid managed care plans, TRICARE, and state and local governmental plans.

David also focuses on regulatory and compliance matters involving the Affordable Care Act, the Anti-Kickback Statute, the No Surprises Act, the Stark Laws, managed care laws, state licensure, self-disclosures, reimbursement and payment, and participation in Medicare, Medicaid, and other government health care programs. He conducts internal investigations and represents health care companies in state and federal audits, enforcement actions, False Claims Act investigations, and litigation.

David regularly speaks and writes on legal issues impacting the health care industry. He is editor-in-chief of Health Care Counsel, which provides industry executives with practical information for complying with and succeeding within the myriad of federal and state laws impacting the provision of health care. Additionally, he is the lead editor of the Practising Law Institute treatise Health Care Litigation and Risk Management Answer Book and is a contributing author to the Bloomberg Law treatise: Health Care Fraud and Abuse: Practical Perspectives.

Client Work

David represents integrated health care companies, dialysis providers, clinical laboratories, hospital systems, home health providers, urgent care clinics, ambulatory surgery centers, pharmaceutical companies, hospices, long-term care providers, pharmacies, physician practice management companies, and physicians.

His recent work has included:

- Counseling a national home health company on regulatory, reimbursement, and compliance matters related to its participation in state Medicaid programs.
- Conducting internal investigations on behalf of multiple skilled nursing facility chains concerning compliance with Medicare program billing and payment rules.
- Acting as outside general counsel for a nonprofit community health and social service organization.
- Acting as outside general counsel to a startup, health care technology company.

Previous Work

Prior to joining ArentFox Schiff, David worked in the DC office of a leading national law firm where he specialized in antitrust and health care litigation. While at that firm, he litigated complex cases in state and federal court involving health insurers, innovator pharmaceutical companies, generic pharmaceutical companies, and pharmacy benefit managers.

Upon completion of law school, David worked as an attorney for the Civil Division of the DOJ. While at DOJ, he was a member of the small team of lawyers responsible for administering the federal September 11, 2001, Victim Compensation Fund.

Professional Activities

David is a member of the American Health Lawyers Association.

Life Beyond the Law

When David is not working, he likes to escape DC for the mountains and lakes of northern New Hampshire with his wife and two kids. He also maintains an unhealthy allegiance to DC’s long-suffering sports teams (although the Capitals and Nationals have offered him a bit of relief in past years).
