Lindsay's practice focuses on trademark, trade dress, copyright, right of publicity, and art market litigation, prosecution, and transactions. She represents and counsels clients ranging from Fortune 10 companies to individuals and family businesses across a wide array of industries, including: fashion, beauty & retail; art, media, publishing, music & entertainment; food, alcoholic beverage & health; architecture, interior design & real estate; and technology, among others.

Lindsay is a relentless advocate for her clients and particularly excels at crafting and executing novel strategies and creative solutions in both litigation and litigation-avoidance alike. While she is effective at resolving disputes early, she is also a go-to lawyer for bet-the-company high-stakes litigations. In connection with those cases, Lindsay routinely leans on her prosecution and transactional skills to develop game-changing litigation strategies and defenses that litigators without those experiences often do not see.

Prior to law, she worked in the contemporary art world managing high-value collections and advising artists, galleries, and nonprofit organizations. With deep roots in the arts, Lindsay brings first-hand industry knowledge to art market transactions and disputes.

Litigation

In the litigation space, Lindsay handles all stages of litigation and administrative actions in federal and state court and before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board and Copyright Office Review Board. She also works closely with foreign counsel to oversee her client's foreign disputes and to coordinate claims and defenses when those disputes span around the world. Lindsay also has expertise in the growing intersection of fraud, unfair competition, big data, and intellectual property and has successfully shut down numerous fraudulent internet and telephone scams that were harming clients' IP and goodwill.

Prosecution and Counseling

In the prosecution space, Lindsay assists clients in procuring trademark and copyright registrations and manages worldwide IP portfolios in an array of fields, including for one of the largest companies in the world. She also provides day-to-day counseling and advice on issues including trademark, copyright, moral rights, and right of publicity protection and enforceability.

Transactions

In the transactional space, Lindsay has extensive experience drafting and negotiating a wide array of agreements across industries, including IP licenses, joint venture agreements, gallery representation and consignment agreements, advertising services agreements, book publishing agreements, releases, production agreements, and settlement and co-existence agreements.

Client Work

Fashion, Beauty & Retail:

- Key team member in the four-year long defense of athleisure brand RBX Active in a bet-the-company litigation brought by two well-known global athletic brands. Achieved numerous discovery victories, including: successfully piercing privilege under the crime-fraud exception based on a finding of trademark fraud on the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, adidas America, Inc. v. TRB Acquisitions LLC, No. 3:15-CV-2113-SI, 2018 WL 4600291 (D. Or. Sept. 25, 2018); and obtaining court orders waiving attorney client privilege and work product under Federal Rule of Evidence 612 due to 30(b)(6) witnesses' review of privileged documents to prepare for depositions, adidas America, Inc. v. TRB Acquisitions LLC, 324 F.R.D. 389 (D. Or. 2017). These evidentiary opinions are now cited in trademark treatises in connection with teaching best practices.
- Successfully asserted trademark infringement claims on behalf of renowned fashion college against competing school that was infringing on its federally registered and incontestable name; case settled favorably and infringing school rebranded.
- Defended international fashion houses against various copyright infringement claims, including in connection with social media posts and fabric patterns.
- Obtained a favorable settlement for a defendant in the footwear space after asserting vigorous defenses against the plaintiff's novel trade dress claims. The Second Circuit later affirmed a finding that the plaintiff's trade dress was invalid for the same reasons.
- Assisted global sportswear brand in successfully terminating a license agreement on favorable terms without costly litigation.
- Advised clothing manufacturer and retailer on intellectual property risks and available defenses associated with use of slogans and images of celebrities and politicians on apparel and accessories.
- Develop, manage, and protect global IP portfolios for fashion, retail, and beauty brands, including one of the largest e-commerce companies in the world.
