Chris has been retained by real estate developers, entrepreneurs and business interests as lead and general counsel in the strategic planning, implementation and successful disposition of significant, complex, diverse and highly visible transactions, collectively monetized at billions of dollars in aggregate value. Chris's background also directly brings to the table experience and expertise in the representation of clients in the conduct and resolution of substantial real estate, partnership, joint venture and business litigation.

Developers, investors, private business ventures, entrepreneurs, corporations, and business enterprises of all kinds, including colleges, professional sports franchises, non-profit entities, start-ups, and public/private partnerships, have all benefitted from Chris's deeply experienced and insightful counsel and stalwart performance.

His approach is direct, hands-on and immersive in the projects he takes on: Commercial real estate acquisitions and dispositions; project and joint venture strategic planning, equity structuring and financings; office, lab, industrial and retail leases; deal organization and tax structuring; construction, architectural, and business contracts; zoning and environmental issues; and project permitting and development entitlements at all municipal, state and federal levels. The results speak for themselves.

Client Work

Successes in the representation of clients in substantially valued real estate and business transactions and ventures are indicative of the scope and caliber of Chris's value to a deal team.

— The Boston Celtics Ownership. Legal co-counsel to the top tier executive management and ownership interests of The Boston Celtics in their initial equity structuring, acquisition and financing of the NBA franchise.

— The Boston Celtics Team and Organization. Lead counsel to the Boston Celtics in several separate
